London Says Truce Sought With French Colonials At West African Port

Vichy Report Says At Least 100 Casualties Occur In Engagement

(BULLETIN)
(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 24—British and "Free French" forces under General Charles De Gaulle seeking a truce with French Colonials at Dakar, Senegal, withdrew from the west African port after being fired on from the shore, it was announced in London today.

Despite this announcement, reports reaching usually well-informed circles indicated that the Dakar engagement continued today after a lull which lasted throughout the night.

Three French warships proceeded to Dakar convoying transports which carried "important" De Gaulle forces especially trained in "blitzkrieg" methods in England.

Informed British quarters had no confirmation of a report that French planes from Morocco bombarded Gibraltar in retaliation for the Dakar expedition.

Communique Issued

Simultaneously with an announcement by the British ministry of information that De Gaulle's forces attempted no landing at Dakar, the latter's headquarters issued this communique:

"Called to Dakar by numerous Frenchmen anxious to continue the fight on his side, De Gaulle appeared with French soldiers and sailors before the (Dakar) fortress.

Today's weather conditions may develop another traffic hazard on streets and highways. Rain will bring down a lot of leaves from the trees. Wet leaves on streets or highways make a skiddy condition, so that motorists should beware of the hazard.

Another period of daylight savings time will expire with the present week. While New Castle observed Eastern Standard time this summer and there will be no altering of clocks in this city over the week end, there will be considerable effect because of time changes in metropolitan areas. Railroad schedules will be adjusted to meet the change. Daylight time ends early Sunday morning, officially.

Near approach of the "bad" weather period of the year doesn't hold the threat for the city street department that once was the situation. Paving program carried out in this city over the past few days has resulted in many of the dirt streets being improved so that they do not need attention all fall and winter as was formerly the case. In former years ashing of miles of dirt streets was one of the big problems of the street department all winter long. Ashing of icy hills has of later years become one of the big tasks.

Secretary Hull Studies Far Eastern Problem

By JOSEPH H. BAIRD
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Japan's open defiance of repeated American warnings not to violate treaty obligations by invading French Indo-China today presented the state department with its most serious far eastern problem since the Nipponese attacked the international city of Shanghai in 1937.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull and his adisvers on far eastern affairs, obviously concerned over the serious trend of events in the Orient, spent several hours late yesterday in conference. They issued a vigorous denial of reports from Vichy, temporary headquarters of the French government, that the United Statess knew about and agreed to France's gun-point surrender to Jananese demands for military right-of-way through Indo-China.

States U. S. Disapproved

It was learned that the state department has been doing everything possible through diplomatic channels to back up the resistance of the colonial Indo-China government to the demands for permission to send

Four Hundred Planes In Battle Over England

British Defenses And Planes Beat Back Attempted London Raids

Day Attacks Follow Night Of Furious Action—London And Berlin Bombed

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Sept. 24—Four hundred snarling warplanes flashed against a brilliant sky above the southeast coast of England today as the coordinated defense of British fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns beat back two abortive raids in London in one of the most spectacular running gun battles in days.

Sirens screamed twice in London, and a few from the German squadrons managed to reach the central city. But British defense had them coming and going and splashes in the channel indicated several raiders had been brought down.

Streaking in over the Kentish coast, the German bomber formations were rent asunder by anti-aircraft fire, while R. A. F. fighter planes streaked into the attack against faster German pursuit ships.

Berlin Claims London Railway Station Bombed

Historic Waterloo Station Is Bombed Says Reich Air Ministry

(International News Service)

BERLIN, Sept. 24—German warplanes bombed the centrally-located and historic Waterloo railway station in London this morning, the Reich Air Ministry announced this afternoon.

Announcement of the bombing of the gigantic terminal, one of the largest in the British capital, was contained in a brief air force bulletin which also claimed that the India docks in London and other military objectives were attacked during the course of the morning raids.

(Waterloo station, the terminus for the Southern Railway and principal point of departure for continental-bound trains, is located near the famous Waterloo bridge and within a two mile radius of some of Britain's principal government buildings.)

During the course of the morning attack large fires were reportedly started in industrial plants at Newcastle and at a big arsenal in greater Yarmouth.

The new German aerial offensive precipitated a series of running dog fights over South England, the air ministry said.

During yesterday's raids over England, Nazi warplanes showered the historic university town of Cambridge with bombs in retaliation for the British bombing of Heidelburg.

ABOARD WILLKIE SPECIAL ENROUTE BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 24.—Satisfied that the far west has given him a fair hearing and turned out record crowds, Wendell Willkie headed east today and at the same time took on a new schedule carrying his campaign through Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York—including up-state—New England and the middle west.

Some details of the schedule were lacking but for the moment the augmented schedule provides for carrying the trip through from Freeport, Ill., where the original itinerary ended Sept. 27, to Madison, Wis., for a meeting at the university field.

From Madison, the campaign train will run into Chicago for a brief service stop, then on to New York where Willkie will speak at Empire race track on the night of the 28th.

Man And Two Boys Are Found Dead By Bullet Wounds

New York Police Baffled, Is It Murder And Suicide Or Triplicate Murder

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Death in triplicate—murder and suicide or triple murder—was uncovered on a bank of the Bronx river far uptown today.

Under a riverbank tree from which autumnal colored leaves were falling, a passerby stumbled across the bodies of a man and two boys. The man was between 30 and 35, the boys about ten or 12 years old. All three were well dressed.

Close to the man's body lay a .38 calibre pistol. In the head of each victim was a single bullet wound. Death, believed to have occurred several days ago, was instantaneous in each case.

There was no immediate clue to identity of any of the victims.

Thousands In Line Of March For Day-Long Parade At Convention

(International News Service)

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—Americanism was on parade today under sunny skies and over the historic streets of the city where Americanism was born.

The American Legion staged its 22nd annual day-long "big parade" to the martial ryhthm of 400 bands and drum corps, to the cheers of 2,500,000 spectators, beneath waving banners, through lanes of red, white and blue decorations, and under barrages of tons of confetti and cut paper.

Over historic Beacon Hill and through the business district of old Boston 100,000 legionnaires, members of the auxiliary, sons and daughters of veterans, present day army regulars and sailors tramped in a gay peacetime spectacle.

Call Upon Election Boards For Service In Draft Registration

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Sept. 24.—Pennsylvania's county election boards today were preparing to register approximately 1,500,000 men eligible for peace-time military training October 16.

With only one county, Philadelphia, defering approval, the state's 66 other counties accepted Gov. Arthur H. James' plan of calling upon election boards to serve without pay. He pointed out that President Roosevelt's letter to governors of all 48 states specifically mentions election officials.

Would Substitute Teachers

The Philadelphia commissioners, led by Morton Witkin, president, proposed the substitution of school teachers for election officials in handling the registration of men between the ages of 21 and 35 in Pennsylvania. Governor James, presiding at the conference of county commissioners, opposed the plan.

"The use of school teachers or any other individual groups would be purely additional," the governor stated.

German Invasion Plans Again Hit

R. A. F. Continues Relentless Bombing Of Channel Ports During Night

(International News Service)

A SOUTHEASTERN ENGLISH COASTAL TOWN, Sept. 24.—Fresh organization of German invasion plans were scorched during the night by relentless R. A. F. bombing of French channel ports, it appeared today, as another dawn brought continued calm to the Straits.

The channel was calm as a lake and bathed in brilliant sunshine this morning. A thin film of light cloud, hardly moving under the impetus of a gentle westerly breeze, hung in the sky.

The French coast was faintly visible through a slight mist, as military experts believed the latest pounding by British bombers of Nazi invasion springboards meant the Germans would have to reorganize their invasion plans once more.

Claim Germany Suffered Heavy Loss Of Troops

London Paper Says 50,000 To 60,000 Lost In Disaster Along Coast

(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 24—In a dispatch from the Franco-Spanish frontier the London Daily Mail, reported today that Germany lost between 50,000 and 60,000 picked troops in the gale and "bombing disaster," which scattered the Nazi invasion fleet along the French channel coast last week.

According to the daily mail a majority of the fleet was scattered along the lonely bleak Flanders coast.

Were Ready To Go

Most of the German ships, said the report, carried a full complement of troops and were ready to cross the English channel, on September 15.

But their departure was delayed, said the mail, owing to the aerial drubbing meted out to German planes over England on the same day.

The following day, Monday, the gale broke and the German ship anchorages became "death traps" the dispatch said.

It is related that tugs desperately tried to tow the invasion troop barges to safety but that scores of them turned over, drowning thousands of men, while the R. A. F. "mercilessly bombed the remnants."

Berlin-Rome For 'Total War'

Renounce Possibility Of Peace By Negotiation Says Berlin Announcement

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—Germany and Italy have decided to renounce all possibility of peace by negotiation and will now fight "total war" until the British empire is smashed, it was announced in Berlin today.

This fateful decision was reached, it was said, during the visit to Rome of Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop. The Axis, an official spokesman declared, has decided to abandon all possibilities of a compromise and will wage "full out" warfare even at the risk of American involvement or of augmented American aid to Great Britain.

Somewhat unexpectedly, the spokesman disclosed that up until the time Von Ribbentrop went to Rome, there still existed a faint prospect that some sort of understanding with Britain might put an end to hostilities.

But after weighing all chances, he stated, Germany and Italy reached the conclusion that the quickest road to peace is over the route of total war.

"It will shortly be accelerated on all fronts," the spokesman said.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—President Roosevelt arrived in the capital today after a week end at his Hyde Park, N. Y. home and hurried to the executive offices to scan latest reports on the tense far eastern situation and to continue the work of setting draft machinery in motion.

No state department officials met the president at union station, but it was understood that Secretary of State Hull would "fill in" Mr. Roosevelt early in the day on late developments in French Indo-China, where Japanese troops are on the march despite repeated U. S. warnings against disturbing the far eastern status quo.

The president also was expected to name a national draft director either today or tomorrow, following announcement at Hyde Park yesterday that this action would be taken "early this week."

Cochran was driving his car out of the first alleyway west of Green street into Grant street. Policeman H. L. Richards saw Cochran's car and endeavored to avoid a crash by swerving the police car. However, he was unsuccessful.

Showalter was taken to the Jameson Memorial hospital where his shoulder was re-set after which he was conveyed to his home.

Nazi Transports Bombed By R.A.F.

Large Calibre Guns Also Take Part In Attack On Transports

(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 24—Twenty German transports grouped at an unidentified point along the French coast were attacked by British coastal guns and Royal Air Force planes, it was learned in London today.

(Editor's Note: The average transport carries approximately 2,500 men although some German ships used for this purpose have accommodated 4,000.)

One large calibre shell scored a direct hit, it was said.

Meanwhile, official observers disclosed an attack by five British bombers on a Nazi naval patrol in the Channel consisting of four mosquito boats. One vessel was set afire and all fled to France while the British planes returned safely.

Observers reported a new large balloon seen hovering over Calais. It was believed to be either for artillery observation or a new type of barrage erected against nightly R. A. F. bombings.

Youths Reaching 21 Register Yearly

Registration Day Yearly Planned

Approximately 6,500,000 More Men Subject To Draft In Five Years

LABOR DAY MAY BE DAY TO ENROLL

By JACK VINCENT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—Approximately 6,500,000 more men—youths now between the ages of 16 and 31—will be brought under the new draft law during the next five years as they become of age, bringing the total manpower subject to conscription to 23,000,000 men it was learned today.

About 16,500,000 men, now between the ages of 21 and 35, inclusive must resister at 120,000 polling places throughout the country on October 16, under the compulsory military training law.

Yearly Registration

In addition, it was learned that a yearly registration day will be proclaimed by the president so that those reaching draft age during the coming years until the draft age expires in 1945 will be brought under the law.

Labor Day, the first Monday in September, has been tentatively selected as registration day in the future and it it estimated that about 1,300,000 men will be called upon to register every year.

Meanwhile, national officials of draft headquarters in Washington under mandate by President Roosevelt to administer the law so there will be "the least possible disruption of the social and economic life of the nation," plunged into the second day of a series of week-long conferences to work out details of cooperation between the federal government and states.

Chiefs Attend

Attending the conferences are the chiefs of personnel of the nine army corps areas and the liaison officers of the army that will act as messengers between national draft headquarters and state boards.

Addressing the conferences, which are "school sessions" for the corps area officials are Lt. Col. Lewis B. Hershey, executive officers of the draft board, and members of President Roosevelt's special draft advistory committee.

The latter included Osborne and Col. William H. Draper, Jr., both of New York. Draper, in an address, stressed the need for administration of the act "without fear or favor and without discrimination among men." He pointed out that the boards must have public support for success of the draft, and said that army officers, other than acting in an advisory capacity to state headquarters, must leave administration entirely in the hands of local boards composed entirely of civilians.

Same Theme

Virtually the same theme was struck by President Roosevelt at Hyde Park N. Y., yesterday when he signed the executive order setting up the official draft machinery and promulgating the first two of six volumns of regulations for carrying out the law.

President Roosevelt explained that there will be one local draft board for about every 30,000 population in the nation, or an estimated total of about 6,500. After registration Day, appeal boards will be set up, one for about every 70,000 registrants. If a registrant objects to the classification given him bye the local board, he will be allowed to carry his case to the appeal group.

The president will appoint the local boards upon recommendations by state governors. It was made clear that the recommendations of Republican governors will be accepted the same as those of Democrats so there can be no complaint of partisanship.

Draft board officials said the same procedure would apply in appointment of between 6,500 and 10,000 paid clerks for the local boards. Where there is a Republican administration, the Republicans will be allowed to make the appointments.

JAPANESE AND FRENCH CLASH IN INDO-CHINA

anese planes attacked Langson in an effort to clear a path for Nipponese ground forces.

Bomb French Troops

Other Japanese aircraft bombed French troops on the ground and an Indo-Chinese airport near the border, causing air raid alarms to be sounded throughout Indo-China and sending virtually the whole population to air raid shelters.

Two of the Japanese planes attacking Langson were shot down, Haiphong dispatches said.

French women and children were evacuated from border areas as the Japanese assaulted French positions along a 12-mile frontier stretch near Dong Dang.

Claim Violation

French officials at Hanoi declared the Japanese had violated the agreement signed on Sunday by trying to enter Indo-China from China Proper. These sources said the agreement had stipulated that no Japanese troops of Nippon's south China army were to enter until a subsidiary agreement had been reached.

Some circles looked upon the new Japanese assaults as a Nipponese face-saving effort owing to their enforced withdrawal from Dong Dang in Sunday's fighting.

French sources were reported indignant at the alleged Japanese breach of the agreement and expressed belief the accord now might be voided. However, they said more negotiations probably would follow with a similar agreement reached in the end, providing for Indo-Chinese concessions to Tokyo, including military bases in Indo-China.

New Fighting

The Saigon radio in Indo-China confirmed reports of the new frontier fighting and said the French had evacuated Dong Dang as untenable in the face of the Nipponese land and air attack.

Severe fighting occurred at Langson, according to these accounts, which added that the planes which raided Langson had come from a Japanese aircraft carrier anchored in the Gulf of Tonking.

The radio also reported more than 100 wounded survivors of the Dong Dang fighting arrived at Hanoi, over-taxing hospital facilities and crowding Red Cross stations.

It was understood all French nationals were being evacuated from the frontier provinces and that the Hanoi government had requisitioned all motor transport for this purpose.

The hard part is to draw the line, if you can find it, between Fifth Columnists and those who hope Hitler will win.

The Stimson report disclosed that the War Department had doubled its original promise on immediate contracts in the ten days between September 7 and 17. When the appropriation act was signed, assistant Secretary Robert P. Patterson, estimated that $524,000,000 in contracts would be let at once. As of September 17, Stimson reported the actual total to have reached $1,000,810,889.

Hull indicated that he was giving thought to further action in the far east, but refused to indicate what line he might take. His associates also declined to "tip off Japan", as they put it, to whatever action is being planned.

Two possible courses are known to be under consideration by the administration: an embargo, in cooperation with the British, on oil shipments to Nippon; and the possible stationing of American naval units at Singapore.

minutes, the German bombers scurried for France, with Messerschmidt escort ships covering their retreat. British Hurricanes and Spitfires chased them fleeing formations all the way to France.

Still another sky battle raged over the Thames estuary as more German warplanes strove to penetrate the capital's defenses. Both attacks touched off the 120th and 121st alarms in the bomb-pocked city.

During the first alarm London remained calm as workers continued to their offices while protective British fighting plane patrols circled over the city.

Latest reports reaching London said that just before this alarm sounded a strong force of German bombers and Messerschmidt fighters tried to penetrate the capital's defenses without success and launched a second attempt, also a failure, while the alarm was still in progress.

Used 150 Machines

London sources estimated that the Germans used a total of 150 machines and that at least five were shot down over the Thames estuary and east coast in a series of vicious air combats.

Reports from the southeast coast said that watchers there saw at least 100 German machines cross the coastline, but return within half an hour in badly scattered formations and hotly pursued by British fighters.

Some of the Nazi craft were seen to be gradually losing height, with smoke pouring from their tails, as they neared the French coast in their hurried flight.

At least two of the German planes were seen diving to earth with smoke pouring from their fuselages over the Thames estuary area, where furious air combats raged for a full 15 minutes.

While this battle progressed between 30 and 40 high explosive bombs fell on the Thames estuary district, doing some damage and causing an unknown number of casualties.

Second Alarm

The second alarm sounded in London when still more raiders approached the Thames estuary, but this time a terrific anti-aircraft barrage and speedy British fighter attacks split up and drove off the main German formation.

A few of the German planes, however, managed to penetrate over the London area, causing anti-aircraft guns in central London to start firing.

Within a short time the city returned to normal.

Watchers on the southeast coast reported that the Germans came across in two great waves. In the second 21 Dornier bombers, flying in a straight line, came out of the glaring sunlight and zoomed over the Kent coast, heading inland toward London.

Waves of Messerschmidt fighters circled above and below the bombers, which drew terrific barrages of ground fire as they crossed the coast.

The first major Nazi assault of the day followed a night of furious action in which British bombers attacked Berlin and the German-occupied French coast and the Nazis gave London another all-night pounding.

SEEK TO CONNECT KIDNAPER WITH MATTSON CRIME

who has put into many ports in the world and plied the barber's trade ashore—in addition to kidnaping.

If he said, "yes, that's the man," Muhlenbroich goes to Tacoma and, from the circumstantial evidence already woven about him, he will be a distinct longshot in a federal court hearing on a charge of killing the Mattson boy. The odds are all in favor of a guilty verdict and its consequent death penalty.

If William Mattson, however, said, "no, he's not the man," Muhlenbroich is expected to be turned over to the district attorney of San Mateo County, Cal., to face the De Tristan accusation, which carries life imprisonment upon conviction, but life itself is spared.

What he said unfortunately is not known at this time, the principals in the drama being protected from questioners by the G-men and the latter being both unable and unwilling to talk. They are waiting for J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, to make an announcement at the national capital, or officially to unloose their tongues.

Lumberman To Be Rewarded

In the meantime, the beautiful young American-born countess Marc De Tristan, at the De Tristan's Hillsborough estate, said she would "handsomely reward" the husky lumberman, Cecil Wetzel, who felled Muhlenbroich Sunday and took her 2½ year old son, Marc De Tristan, away from him after he had held the child for two days and before a $100,000 ransom was paid.

The dramatic climax in the life of Muhlenbroich came after a series of developments, which included:

The revelation that Muhlenbroich, living under his own name in a rooming house while he worked as a barber under the cognomen of "Burger," had been visited a number of times by a mysterious woman about 50 years of age—a woman whom Muhlenbroich himself said was "a governess who works for a prominent Hillsborough family."

The further revelation that the sailor-barber, going by several names in Canada and San Francisco, had boasted of his intense hatred of the French people—giving rise to the theory that he chose the scion of a noted French family for kidnaping in order to satisfy some insane racial fury.

Child Back To Normal

At the De Tristan estate the child, none the worse for his experiences, was back to normal routine and playing happily about the broad lawns.

All police officers in the case concentrated on a search for possible accomplices.

Constantly accumulating circumstantial evidence was that the tight-lipped German must almost certainly have had the aid of other persons, possibly a woman among them, in his desperate gamble for the $100,000 ransom money he never saw.

But topping all those developments was still the Mattson angle—which on the strength of one sentence of identification by dead Charlie Mattson's brother, may mean death for the German.

He was violently pro-Nazi, officers said, boasting often of a prowess of the German people, and he followed Hitler's triumphs with delight. He was anti-Jewish, outspoken against all but "Aryans."

Brother In German Army

He has a brother in the German army. One of his hands is deeply scarred—partly shot away in the World war. He boasted of fighting in three wars.

Young Mattson was in the room when his brother was kidnaped. The "foreign looking" man who broke into that room to snatch the child to death wore a mask. But that mask slipped—and William Mattson gained one positive view of the kidnaper's face.

Muhlenbroich was visited on at least four occasions in his San Francisco room by the Hillsborough governess. It was emphasized that she was not a nursemaid.

Henry Mirejovsky, who once rented Muhlenbroich a room in San Francisco told inquirers that the woman—described as 50 or 55, portly, dignified, the "foreign governess type"—went to Muhlenbroich's apartment time and again. Often they talked behind closed doors.

Muhlenbroich, babbling to Mirejovsky, subsequently himself volunteered the information that the woman was a governess, spoke both French and German, had worked in Pasadena, and was working in a Hillsborough mansion at the time she was visiting him.

But if the war goes on for years, cities will be operating forty feet underground, and what will the bombers do then, poor things?

DAKAR REPORTS ABOUT ATTACKS ARE CONFUSING

dered fire opened on De Gaulle and his emissaries who had come without weapons on a motor launch flying the tricolor and the white flag of parliamentarism.

"Rather than continue a fight against Frenchmen, De Gaulle withdrew.

"The emissaries were Frigate Captains Gotscho, Becourt, Fosch, D'Argenlieu, and Perrin. The latter two were seriously wounded.

"Later De Gaulle attempted to land his troops peacefully.

"Fire was reopened on the French sloop Savorgnan De Barazza. Commandant Duvoc, Commandant Demine and several men were killed and many wounded.

"The men and ships were ordered to withdraw to avoid a fight between Frenchmen."

Report Casualties

VICHY, Sept. 24.—At least 100 casualties on both sides were reported today as British and "Free French" forces accompanying the British squadron that shelled Dakar, capital of Senegal, made several futile attempts to land on Senegal's sandy beaches and seize the strategic West Africa town.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: London admitted casualties, but denied that any forceful landing attempts had been made. The mission was a peaceful one, it was said, but Dakar opened fire although the emissaries carried a flag of truce.)

Time and again, according to word received in Vichy, the invaders were hurled back from the beaches "carrying their dead and wounded with them."

One French submarine anchored in Dakar harbor—part of the flotilla that steamed from Toulon through the straits of Gibraltar unmolested by British guns—was hit in the shelling."

Report Losses

The attacking forces, led by General Charles De Gaulle, chief of the "Free French" elements fighting with England against Germany, were said to have suffered heavy losses when they were hurled back by French defenders of the vital French West Africa port.

Simultaneously it was reported, but not officially confirmed, in Vichy that 120 French planes stationed at Morocco bombed Gibraltar, British Mediterranean stronghold, in retaliation for the British naval bombardment of Dakar.

The landing attempts were made after the British naval force shelled both Dakar and the adjoining European-populated city of Cape Verde in a bold attempt to seize French West Africa.

According to word received in Vichy the chief landing attempt was made at 1 a. m. on the Rufisque beach northwest of Dakar.

The number of casualties suffered by the invaders was not reported but was said to be "important."

Under cover of heavy gun fire which partly destroyed the Dakar broadcasting station, these accounts said, one of the British troop transports succeeded in moving along the West African coast to a point near the Rufisque beach.

There, it was claimed, 150 men were on the point of landing when they were met with heavy machine gun fire.

Surprised by this resistance, at a time when they expected to take the beach by surprise owing to a heavy fog, the invaders reembarked in their landing boats—carrying their dead and wounded with them, the French reports stated.

The shelling, in which 60 persons were reported killed and an equal number wounded, began after French authorities rejected an ultamatum calling for surrender.

CALL ELECTION BOARDS IN DRAFT REGISTRATION

sioners yesterday. Governor James discussed with military and legal aides, President Roosevelt's letter authorizing him to organize the draft machinery in the state.

"There are several things that need clarification," the governor said. "For instance, there is the important matter of money for registration places. If we are to use the regular polling places, we've got to remember that those places are rented for elections. In some communities, it is necessary to utilize schools or even barber shops. So far we have had no indication from the president on these details."

8,113 Polling Places

Plans at the present call for registration in the state's 8,113 polling places. Governor James has before him the names of 2500 civilians who have been suggested for service on local draft boards. These appointments are subject to the president's approval.

Concerning the naming of a draft director for the state, the governor said he would appoint an "outstanding leader" with no political connections as state draft director. He already has named Lieut. Col. Benjamin F. Evans of Wilkes-Barre, deputy adjutant general, as assistant director.

President Roosevelt, writing to all governors of the 48 states, said "the procurement and training of our man-power . . . is undoubtedly the most important single factor in our entire program of national defense. I ask your every help."

"I request you to carry out the registration within your state and to call upon your local election officials and other patriotic citizens to serve on the registration boards."

B. Nielsen, of Hazelcroft avenue and Clyde Dixon, of Youngstown, O., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Dixon, of Cortland, O.

The occasion also provided a dual purpose, inasmuch as it was carried out in the nature of a birthday shower. The bride-elect received an array of beautiful gifts, her anniversary falling on October 13.

Afterwards, the assemblage numbering fourteen, was invited to the adjoining dining room and seated around a beautifully candlelighted table, with appointments being carried out in pink. Dainty colonial bouquets with name cards, marked each place and midget "oaken buckets" filled with nut meats had small announcement cards, which told the news, reading "Ginnie and Dick—October 19, 1940." The autumnal motif tied in with the nuptial idea, and adorning the large table, was a unique "Wishing Well" of stone, with a miniature bride and groom arranged in the center. Greenery, ferns and small pink pom-pons flanked the base of the centerpiece. A delicious repast was served.

Guests attending from out of town included Miss Alberta Hartman, Mrs. George Wester and Mrs. Richard Wester of Youngstown, O., and Mrs. Ned Dixon of Cortland, O.

Special guests included Mrs. Nora Filgrove and Mrs. George Weilding of Pittsburgh, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Anderson of McKeesport, Mrs. Fred Ott and son and Mrs. Leathers, this city.

Their next gathering will be in the form of an outing to be held on Saturday night of this week, at the same place.

Shower Party

Miss Joan Zywar, a bride elect of this month, was honored Sunday at Oakland Hall when 125 friends gathered in her honor. Music and social diversions were enjoyed and a delicious lunch was served at a suitable hour by Mrs. Payto, Kate Gierlach, Ann Bigley and Mrs. Nyez.

Many lovely gifts were received by the honoree for her new home.

On September 28 Miss Zywar will become the bride of Nick Payto in Madonna church.

Just as everybody was thinking that politics had become a dead issue, speeches begin popping again and the air is electric with oratorial fireworks. WHAT NATIONAL CENSUS SHOWS

NOW that the census returns are in, listing the country's population at 131,409,881, we can relax for another ten years while the statistically minded amuse themselves with population trends and similar diverting data.

The United States has more people in it today than it had ten years ago—8,634,835 more to be exact—which must make uncomfortable reading for those who dislike being in crowds. As a melancholy feature for patriots who believe each day should outstrip the previous one in everything, the rate of population increase for the decade was only seven per cent, smallest in history.

Census enthusiasts like to talk of the 1810-1820 decade when the population jumped nearly 34 per cent. This figure, however, may have included some of the British soldiers who visited this country for the War of 1812.

The slackened rate of population increase is ascribed by the experts to the lowered birth rate in the country and the virtual stoppage of immigration since 1930. The District of Columbia, however, showed what can be done despite such handicaps by registering a gain of 36.2 per cent, outpacing every one of the states.

It doesn't take any specialist in population trends to figure out why Washington, D. C., has propelled itself into the honor roll of the census. Given federal payroll attractions, even the dust-bowl states could be setting new population records.

THE RISING TIDE OF FIRE WASTE

The rising tide of fire waste, writes W. E. Mallalieu of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, threatens national defense. During the early months of this year, fire loss was substantially higher than it was for the same period last year or the year before. And that is taking place at a time when America's intricate industrial machine must be geared to maximum efficiency and maximum production in turning the defense program blueprints into actual tanks and airplanes and warships and guns.

On top of that, even disregarding the defense factor, fire is the arch enemy of the public welfare. Mr. Mallalieu cites a hypothetical case in which a great factory is destroyed. Men are thrown out of jobs, and are no longer able to pay their bills. Local merchants, professional men and landlords suffer. Taxes go unpaid. Orders are cancelled. And so the local depression caused by such a fire reaches out to distant cities, touching other factories, other businesses, other workers and their families. Commercial history shows that many of the business institutions suffering serious loss by fire are unable to survive. They can't come back.

Big fires such as this hypothetical case are not so rare as you might think. During the first five months of this year alone, there were 53 fires causing damage of $200,000 or more each. One of them took a toll of $1,000,000 and another of $700,000. And such tragedies will be repeated again and again before the year ends, if past precedent holds.

This year the cause of fire prevention, always vital, is of even more direct importance to all of us—to everyone with a job, everyone with an investment, everyone who wants to see our defense program go forward without a hitch. Such events as National Fire Prevention Week, which is being nationally observed from October 6 to 12, are carried on in the interest of every family. Enlist today in the battle against fire. And enlist for the duration of hostilities!

BELEAGURED LONDON

London, when this war is over, may resemble one of those tragic cities along the old Western Front more than twenty years ago—Rheims or Lille—cities where evidence of war's ravages were to be found everywhere.

News reports are to the effect that after more than two weeks of the most ferocious bombing in military history about 20,000 buildings have been hit. Of this number 2,500 have been destroyed and 4,000 seriously damaged. While this represents only a small percentage of the city's 1,000,000 buildings, the attack, according to German military authorities, is only in its initial stages and will be continued with increasing intensity until the hour of attempted invasion.

London today is a beleagured city and the conditions governing its siege are making new history. It is not surrounded by troops, as were Vicksburg and Richmond in the American Civil War and Paris in the Franco-Prussian War. It has free access to the rest of England and will not be reduced to starvation. But the punishment to which the world's largest city is being subjected is just as agonizing as if entrenched soldiers and artillery occupied the surrounding ground and poured shells into the city from dawn until evening and throughout the night.

In the siege of London, unlike the sieges of past history, operations are being maintained by the ever-returning Nazi air fleets, which unload their cargoes of bombs, fly back over the Channel and return with more. With each return there is more death and more destruction.

If this siege of London were the whole story of the war it might justify the somber conclusion that England will fall and the Empire will perish. But Royal Air Force bombers are playing havoc with German troop and barge concentrations in the Channel ports. They also are giving Berlin a taste of terror and carrying the war to the Italians. In all respects they are surprising the experts, and in consequence Britain is now given at least a fifty-fifty chance of coming through. And nothing better than an even break is asked by the British.

In having to battle both the British and sand storms in the Egyptian campaign, Mussolini probably thinks Providence is unfair to fascism.

Gandhi announces his followers in India will not make trouble for the British. It is plain that passive resistance has no place in this war.

Franco, it is now reported, wants Hitler and Mussolini to deliver Gibraltar to him. Their first problem is to get it out of British stock.

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

HOME HELP FOR POOR SPELLER

The child who has trouble with spelling needs help right away. The average parent can give it. The longer his troubles persist, the more penalties he will suffer. When he must do written work in the intermediate grades, upper grades and later in high school or college, poor spelling will bring him much discouragement and hold down his grades. It will annoy his teachers and cost him many ugly colored pencil marks. Furthermore, in every day life's social or business pursuits poor spelling will be a serious handicap.

All Can Learn

With normal vision, any person who can read or do arithmetic fairly well can learn to spell as well. Persons are not born with special shortness in spelling. They have just failed to get the hang of spelling. Except for a few words, good spelling is a matter of having learned by heart to spell those words most commonly used in writing.

In case your child in the grades is a poor speller be sure first his eyes have been tested and properly fitted with glasses, if they be needed. See also that he knows the letters of the alphabet. He may not know a number of these letters.

Acquiring Confidence

I wish teachers would assign far fewer words in the average spelling lesson than they do. But regardless of the length of the assignment have your child at home attack only two or three of them an evening. Assure him he need not worry if he cannot spell the rest the next day at school. It is always better to master a few than to mess over many. As he discovers he can spell a few words without doubt or error, he will gradually acquire confidence in ability to improve his spelling.

First of all, create a calm, serene atmosphere. Make him feel relaxed and entirely at ease. Print the word he is to spell all alone on a clean page or card in large neat letters. Pronounce the word as he looks at it. Have him pronounce it after you. Then say the letters slowly in proper sequence as he looks at them. Have him do the same. After he rests have him pronounce and spell the word as he looks at it. He will want to look away and try to spell it. Urge him not to do so but to pronounce and spell it several more times, while looking right at it. Before he tries himself out on it have him look at the word again and print or write it slowly and carefully. Attack the next word in like fashion. Keep drilling him on what he has already learned accurately.

Give Help

When the child writes a lesson or a letter at home, urge him to ask you to spell any word he is doubtful about. Encourage him to continue this practice on through the grades and high school. Don't tell him to look up a word in the

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

AMERICANS

We in the United States call ourselves Americans. But our fast-moving world has brought us into closer contact with a host of new acquaintances beyond the Rio Grande and Caribbean who can also call themselves Americans.

The course of events is often influenced by seemingly trivial things, and one such thing is the way we have drifted into the easy habit of referring to ourselves as Americans—as if we included Canada, Mexico, Central and South America. We understand this little verbal weakness of ours has understandably sometimes ruffled the good nature of our neighbors to the south of us, and perhaps even of our other fellow-Americans in Canada.

We have heard of no one in the South American republics doing so, but as a matter of fact, they could make out a good case for having prior rights to the name of America. It was the adventurer, Amerigo Vespucci, who gave his name to the continent of South America which he discovered in 1497. More than three centuries passed before the term America was universally used to include our continent as well as South America.

Rightfully enough, foreigners often regard as Americans anyone living anywhere in the colossal expanse of lands between the North Pole and Cape Horn. Though right or not, it has jarred United States tourists abroad, having said they were Americans, to be asked, "North or South American?"

Sure enough, we people in the United States are Americans, but so are many million other New World inhibitants. This is a challenge for us to find a more accurate name for the United States Americans. Perhaps United Statesers might do. Or possibly UsAyers. At all events, we're not worrying about it. A country which has produced a language as full of sparkling novelty as American English won't have much trouble finding the right word.

The real honest-to-goodness word problem ahead is to see that the letters U. S. A., continue to stand for the name of a great, free Republic.

Collected dust unheeded.

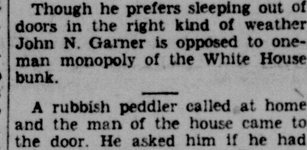

We rolled the lawn and trimmed the shrubs,

We painted everything in sight,
And then the baby tended.

We tinkered up the car a bit,
Took out a knock and wheeze;
Patched up a tire, then for a change
Chopped down a few dead trees.

O, patched and faded overalls,
You haunt vacation's trails.
Go hang yourself—and let me shave
Tonight I'm wearing tails!

One lesson that many girls have to learn to their sorrow is that they cannot, by pursuit, win back men who have strayed into strange pastures.

No amount of pleading will coax a man back into your preserves once he has developed a roving eye and a restless foot. Even though you love him with your whole heart, you will, if wise, make the same maneuver and concentrate on some other likeable swain even though conscious at the time that you cannot love him. Better still—go in for a round of social gaiety with a crowd that will put you in contact with many men. Do your utmost to attract them all. These evidences of your popularity will serve better than anything else to bring back to your side your fickle favorite, who will only be repelled by your fawning glances and your tears.

Readers' Questions Answered

Question: Please give me some tips on tipping my hat, specifying every occasion when this courtesy must be shown.—B. G.

Answer: A man should raise his hat on the following occasions:

Upon meeting any woman whom he knows, whether she be a member of his immediate family (mother, wife, sister, daughter or more distant relative), a very close friend or a casual acquaintance.

When, with a companion of either sex, he is passing a woman to whom that companion speaks.

When meeting or leaving a woman in a public place.

When addressing or being addressed by any woman, be she friend or stranger. For instance, if a strange woman approaches him on the street to ask a direction; or if a woman thanks him for such a courtesy he has shown her, he should raise it in acknowledgment of her thanks.

If a man accompanies a woman and another man—even a stranger to both—extends any courtesy to her, such as picking up a package she has dropped, giving her a seat or holding a door open for her, both men should raise their hats.

What's What At A Glance

British Envoy At Moscow In Right Job
Expelled From Labor Party As Too Red
Is Strong Defender Of His Native Land

By CHARLES P. STEWART
(Central Press Columnist)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—Glancing through European news dispatches one occasionally notes a reference to Sir Stafford Cripps as Britain's ambassador in Moscow.

He isn't mentioned copiously or often enough to advertise him much and I doubt that the average American knows much about him or even, in general, that there is such a person. Washington's diplomats are better posted, however. In their circle the talk's to the effect that he promises to have the value of a good-sized army as a danger to Herr Hitler through his activities at the Russian capital.

To estimate Sir Stafford's potentialities understandingly, it's necessary to have some familiarity with his background.

Originally he was elected to parliament in London by the English Labor party. He wasn't a manual worker. He was a lawyer but he was identified with the party anyway. He won his title as a prominent member of it, while sitting in the house of commons.

A Laborite is supposed to be a liberal and Sir Stafford was decidedly so. In fact, he was referred to as a radical. Finally it began to be asserted that he was a Communist. I don't know whether he really is communistic or not, but the labor party became so convinced of it that it read him out of membership in its ranks for the English Laborites don't go so far as to believe in Communism.

Pretty Middling Ultra

Sir Stafford, then, may fairly be regarded as pretty ultra.

Expelled by the Labor party, for quite awhile he was an unadulterated political orphan. The conservative British government preceding Winston Churchill's accesssion to power wouldn't touch him with a 10-foot pole.

But when Winston took charge it occurred to him that just such a chap as Sir Stafford might be useful in Moscow.

Accordingly he inquired of Commissar Josef Stalin, "Would Sir Stafford be persona grata to Russia as some sort of an attache at John Bull's embassy there?" To this query Joe replied, "We Soviets think very highly of Sir Stafford and we'll be glad to receive him as your ambassador, but there wouldn't be much point in sending him to us in a subordinate diplomatic capacity."

Thereupon Sir Stafford was named to run Britain's whole embassy in Moscow, as supreme boss of it.

100 Per Cent British

Now, whatever Sir Stafford may or may not think as to the merits of Communism, he obviously is 100 per cent British relative to the scrap between his home country and the German-Italian alliance.

He's the very man to do it, if he can satisfy Joe Stalin that now's the ideal time for him to break his loose tie-up with the Axis and jump on the Nazis and the Fascists by way of the Balkans. And he seems to be having tolerably good luck at it. To say the least Soviet versus Axis relations are strained in Rumania. It would be extremely gratifying to Britain to have a Soviet-Axis war start at the present juncture. Even the threat of it must be a serious worry to Berlin and Rome, distracting their attention from elsewhere.

It may not be so difficult to sow the seeds of discord, either.

Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini alike are totalitarians. Hitler and Mussolini are not such inharmonious totalitarians, but neither of them harmonizes with Stalin, nor he with them.

And there are conflicts of interests between the two elements, as well as conflicts of philosophies.

Oh, Such Whisperings!

Well, Joe Stalin has Sir Stafford constantly whispering in his ear. And they're a sympathetic pair philosophically.

I don't suppose Sir Stafford particularly whispers British propaganda. I'd guess that, presumably, he simply reminds Joe of the choice grabs the latter can effect in the Balkans, with Germany and Italy too busy in another direction to interfere with his grabbing.

Thus maybe he can start a Russia-Axis war just when it would be most useful to Britain.

So don't overlook Sir Stafford Cripps in the pending emergency.

The Human Side Of The News

(By EDWIN C. HILL)

Copyright 1940 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A distinguished psychologist once assured me that people don't go crazy all at once. It insn't like falling over a cliff or making a sharp turn. Mental aberrations are the extensions and amplifications of such every-day traits as day-dreaming, self-pity, vanity, envy and "hatred, malice and uncharitableness". Branch off on any of these roads, long enough and far enough, and it leads straight to the squirrel-cage.

The Germans bring this up. In current interpretation of Germany today, even informed and studious interpretation, there is frequent emphasis of something like a national psychosis, perhaps induced by the Versailles treaty and the sufferings of the post-war years. There are also stressed the new, nihilistic and revolutionary aspects of the Teutonic rampage, as against the old patterns of imperialism and power politics. This revolutionary drive is unquestionably there, but it isn't new and we go wrong if we think of it as a demon rather than a growth, distortion and final ascendancy of latent, ingrowing traits.

In our view, the parallel is close between the German mass obsession and the drift of any one man down into cuckoo land, as recorded 25 years ago in a fascinating little book called "The Psychology of Insanity", by a physician named Hart. It's a grand little book in spite of its unpleasant title and has lit up as many dark crypts of the human mind as any book of our time. It is an excellent manual of wholesome mental conditioning.

But, more immediately pertinent to the Germans, is Arthur Bullard's fine book, "The Diplomacy of the Great War", published in 1917. It is most interesting to note that even in that far day every symptom of German goofiness which appalls us today was recorded and studied and had been for a long time. For instance the dominant-race nonsense. Mr. Bullard writes:

"In order to justify the claim of their philosophers that the Germans were a peculiar race with a special mission, it was necessary to invent a false theory of ethnology. There is no fact more firmly established about development of humanity than that there is no such thing as a pure race. Man has developed by an immensely long process of hybridization. From the biological points of view the Germans are no different from the English. The 'kitchen middens'—the refuse heaps of prehistoric communities—along the shores of the Baltic show beyond dispute the presence of the Alpine and Mediterranean brunettes side by side with the northern blondes. Modern science—outside of Germany—it unanimous on this point. But in Germany, the myth of a pure race is still taught.

"The race idea has become little short of an obsession with the Germans. Much comment and indignation has been caused in Europe by some of the maps used in the school geographies of Germany.

NEW YORK—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia believes America's foreign policy is now clear:

"When our secretary of state speaks to any one, they are not looking him in the face, but over his shoulder to see how much of an army and navy there is to back him up."

BOSTON—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman offers a way to peace:

"There is only one road to peace that I know of, the high road of democracy, the road marked by the sign posts of the Ten Commandments, the road back to Christ and His teachings, in personal life, in national life, in international life."

NEW YORK—Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell decries America's "softness":

"In this dark hour of the world's Gethsemane there are millions in America whose one preoccupation is sport and amusement."

PRINCETON, N. J.—Dr. Harold W. Dodds, Princeton prexy, urges intellectual mobilization of democracy:

"Hitler's confidence in his ambitions spring from a belief that the regimes opposed to him lost their will to survive through a paralysis of their power to make the sacrifice necessary for survival."

Russia Seeks Favors From United States

By JOSEPH H. BAIRD
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The Soviet Russian government has asked the United States for a long list of valuable economic and political favors as a basis for the establishment of closer and more cordial relations between Moscow and Washington, International News Service learned today from an official source.

Closely-guarded conversations have been in progress intermittently for two months between Constantine Oumansky, the Communist state's envoy here, and state department officials, including Secretary Cordell Hull and Undersecretary Sumner Welles, it was learned.

Split In Cabinet

Meanwhile, according to a source intimately acquainted with the conversations, a split has developed in the cabinet as to whether Washington should grant the favors that Stalin's envoy is asking.

Hull was represented as feeling that Oumansky's requests were unreasonable—some of them even presumptuous. Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes and Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau were described as believing, however, that the United States could afford to give the Russians substantial benefits in return for an invigorated Soviet-American trade and possible political cooperation in the Far East.

According to the International News Service informant, Oumansky has asked, among others, these American boons:

Asked By Soviet

1. Sale to the Soviet Union, despite the virtual embargo on items vital to the national defense program, of $25,000,000 worth of machine tools.

2. Sale or lease of a fleet of oil tankers.

3. The sending of American technicians to Soviet Russia to supervise the construction of plants for the manufacture of high-octane aviation gasoline.

4. Preferential treatment by immigration officials and the department of justice of Soviet citizens in the United States.

The Soviet Union recently signed a trade agreement with America pledging itself to buy United States goods worth $50,000,000 during the next year. A "loophole" proviso said that goods in this amount would be purchased if American export restrictions permitted the Soviet Union to satisfy its needs here.

Wants Needed U. S. Supplies

Those conversant with the Oumansky-state department talks now have gathered the impression that Russia is interested almost exclusively in products necessary to its industrial expansion and national defense programs—in other words, the very supplies which America now is attempting to conserve for its own defense.

Under the "moral embargo" imposed at the time of Russia's attack on little Finland, Moscow is prohibited from buying aviation grade gasoline or the machinery for its manufacture in the United States.

Although the Soviet oil fields around the Caspian Sea produce large quantities of petroleum (in fact, Russia has an export surplus) the country lacks adequate plants to supply its huge air corps with sufficient high-octane gasoline. Military observers on the Russo-Finnish front reported last winter that the Red army planes were using fuel of a much lower grade than is used by the U. S. army air corps.

Only Three Nations Can Supply

Only three nations in the world—the United States, Germany and Great Britain—are able to supply the complicated machinery needed for production of high-test gasoline. As Germany and Great Britain are in a crucial battle, the United States is, from a practical point of view, the only country that can give Russia the necessary supplies and technical assistance to establish the refineries it considers necessary for its newly-enlarged arms program.

Washington officials were both irked and amused by Russia's request for preferential treatment of its citizens. They pointed out that the Communist state, along with Japan and Germany, have afforded the United States less cooperation in protecting the rights of its own nationals abroad than any other nation in the world.

It was recalled that last fall when German warships escorted the U. S. freighter, City of Flint, into Murmansk harbor, Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt tried futilely for four days to establish telephone contact with the master of the vessel. The envoy later told friends that he was convinced his attempts to telephone Murmansk were purposely thwarted by the Soviet government-controlled telephone trust.

(From the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania)

How old should a woman be when the first baby is born?

Only 2 per cent of mothers are past the 35-year age.

Fifty per cent of babies are born to mothers aged 20-25.

The risk to mothers is greatest with the first child.

The risk is also great with the last of many children.

Age, itself, is not important in maternal deaths.

Health condition, before pregnancy, is important.

With older women this is chief concern with a first baby.

In 1939, 5000 Pennsylvania women aged over 40 bore babies.

These were not all first babies.

It is better, with first babies, if mother is under 40.

Better, doctors say, for all babies, if mother is under 40.

Unless something intervenes, the testimony in the murder case against Arthur F. Dean will be taken Wednesday, September 25 by Judge Thomas W. Dickey. Dean has pleaded guilty to the charge but testimony will be taken to determine what punishment should be meted out.

Michael Bobbino was sentenced to pay a fine of $1 and costs and his voting privilege revoked for four years on Monday when he appeared before Judge Thomas W. Dickey.

Bobbino was convicted of illegal voting in a recent election. His defense at the time was that he is an employe of the state treasurer in Harrisburg and was home here but little. His parents moved into another precinct than the one in which they had been voting and Mr. Bobbino voted in the old precinct.

He appeared for sentence Monday in order to complete the record necessary before an appeal is taken to the Superior court. This appeal was made late Monday afternoon.

A box of naturalization forms came into the office of Prothonotary John A. Edgar a few days ago. The box was unloaded, the forms put away, but a day or so later somebody noticed the address on the box. It was addressed to the Prothonotary of Mercer county.

The county commissioners are due back from Harrisburg sometime today or this evening with the information upon the registration of young men between 21 and 35 years inclusive. They attended a conference Monday afternoon with Governor Arthur H. James.

Nittany Lion In "Tailors" Shop

Cannot Afford Chance Of "Lion" Frightening Anyone, Officials Say At College

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Sept. 24.—Penn State's Nittany Lion is back again at the tailors.

No, not the real ferocious mountain lion that roams the Nittany Mountains and serves as mascot for all Penn State athletic teams, but the lion skin purchased to entertain football fans.

Bought with money subscribed by students and alumni, last year's lion skin was dedicated at homecoming. But the old grads were disappointed. They said it looked like a pole-cat. At least, it wasn't anything like the lion "we used to have."

So this year college officials took matters in their own hands. Eugene Wettstone, varsity gymnastic coach, was dispatched to see that the costumers made an authentic mountain lion.

Expert taxidermists were employed. Wettstone demanded that "not one whisker should be missing, not one claw out of place."

Twice the experts tried and failed. And now, for the third time Wettstone has shipped the skin back to New York. Strangely enough, the latest fault he found was that the animal looked "too ferocious."

"We can't take any chances of the thing scaring anybody," Wettstone said. "The lion should be reasonably tame after its third alteration."

The Human Side Of The News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Neighboring independent countries have been given a color very nearly the same as that of the German empire. But the men who drew these maps, far from intending to insult the people they represented as almost German, undoubtedly thought they were complimenting them."

Going back several centuries, Mr. Bullard finds the remote origins of virtually all the strange self hypnosis and mad aggression which we are too apt to ascribe to the "new Germany". Relative to the character and motivations of Bismarck, he writes:

"Over and above the Deutschland—the geographical section of the globe where their flag flies—hovers a mystic ideal—the "Deutschtum".

It is an expression impossible to translate into English. It is the force of this ideal which has made Germany what it is. It has amalgamated scattered dukedoms and petty principalities into a great, coherent forward pushing nation. It has performed a miracle of psychology. It furnishes the most striking example in history of how to change human nature. Whether you consider it a regeneration or a malignant degeneration, it is impossible to dispute the amazing change which has come over the German people since the days of Goethe or Kant."

Remember, that was in 1917. Mr. Bullard's book is up to date and timely today.

CHANGING THE BABY

I got a letter from a young, very anxious husband. He and his wife are the proud parents of a baby. He was worried. He was absolutely convinced that his wife wasn't putting the diapers on the child in the proper way, and he thought if I gave a few instructions in this column, he could show them to her and she would see she was wrong. Curiously, I get requests even from mothers asking me for the best way to " change" a baby. You would be surprised how many girls get married and have babies, without having the slightest idea how to care for it. But this was the first time I ever got such a request from the father.

Of course, the first rule is to change the baby every time he wets or soils the napkin. After that, the correct procedure is rather simple, for it is based on common sense, as all care of the baby is.

Naturally, the room where the changing is done should be warm and free from drafts. If there are windows open, close them. When you are ready to start the changing, have everything you require within easy reach.

When you start, make sure the baby is in a good safe position on your lap. This is very important, because I have known babies who received serious injuries when they slipped from the grasp of the person who was changing them.

Getting the soiled diaper off the child isn't the only thing to worry about. The baby's buttocks must be well cleaned. For that, use a bit of cotton dipped in warm olive oil. Remember never to dip the same cotton in the oil twice. Keep a fresh supply of cotton and olive oil handy. Sometimes, to clean the child properly, it may be necessary to use a mild soap and water.

Then, there is the matter of safety pins. ALWAYS keep them well away from reach of the baby. If he gets his hands on them, into his mouth they'll go. I remember that once, when the Quins were a few months old, a picture appeared showing them with some safety pins nearby. We must have received at least five hundred letters from persons everywhere warning as not to let the children get at the pins. It's a good idea to fasten the pins to your apron.

Take the clean diaper, fold it in thirds or quarters, depending on the size. When you have the diaper in place, fold over the part that is too long. This part, which is outside the diaper, helps protect the baby's clothing. Also, by bringing it outside this way, you avoid too much fullness between the legs which might disturb the soft bones there. Also, it sometimes keeps the child from exercising properly.

Above all, make sure the diaper is sterile before it goes on the baby.

War Relief Society Of British Reveals Work Accomplished

Western Pennsylvania Society Has Subscribed For Eight Ambulances

Members of the British War Relief Society for the Western Pennsylvania district, which includes a large membership in New Castle, today revealed the work which has been accomplished by the society for the assistance of the homeland.

Eight ambulances have been subscribed for, and 8,865 knitted garments have been completed, besides the contribution of $52,172 in membership funds and donations. In addition, one of the largest X-ray units ever made by an American manufacturer has been purchased and shipped. This was originally ordered for the Norwegian government for $25,000, but the society was able to purchase it for $10,000.

Wool for knitting is supplied free of charge by the Society and the local unit meets on each second and fourth Friday of the month in the First Congregational church on East Reynolds street, the next meeting occurring on September 27.

The medical group has established headquarters in the Y. W. C. A., and will meet each Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock for instruction in the work of making bandages under the supervision of trained experts.

The Society is in constant touch with the British Red Cross and is enabled to learn the most urgent needs of Britain, enabling it to use its funds to the best advantage. Recently, a need for quinine was found and as a result, two million tablets were shipped to England.

It is stated that all clothes contributed should be sprayed with moth destroyer, and should be clean and servicable. Nothing will be accepted for shipment that has already been attacked by moths.

Capt. Roosevelt Stirs Up Capital

Resentment Expressed Over Commission For Son Of President

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Opposition was expressed in congress and the army to the action of the War Department in granting a captain's commission in the Army Specialist's Reserves to Elliott Roosevelt, the president's second son who celebrated his 30th birthday Monday.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (R) of New York said he was surprised young Roosevelt had not been made a brigadier general immediately.

Although criticizing the commission to a man without previous military experience as similar to the 1936 commissioning of James Roosevelt, the president's elder son, as a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps Reserves, Fish said that he was "nevertheless glad that we are at last getting some of the Roosevelts."

Some army officers, holding that young Roosevelt had obtained in a few minutes what they had spent the better part of a career achieving, were especially critical of the move, but declined to permit use of their names.

At his request, Elliott was assigned to the air corps and ordered to report for duty October 7 at Wright Field, Dayton, O., for a year's tour of active duty.

Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the air corps, said young Roosevelt would go into the procurement department, which handles aircraft purchase, radio and advertising.

As a new captain without previous military training, Elliott Roosevelt will receive a salary of $262.67 a month, if he claims dependents, and $224.67 if he does not. He is married and has three children.

Young Roosevelt said his service would force him to sever his radio connections and cancel an eight months' broadcasting contract. He flew back to Fort Worth, Tex., last night to arrange details.

It isn't the gross profit that matters. What industry can live on a ten per cent profit if it must pay a twelve per cent tax?

Hear Testimony In Dean Case In Court Wednesday

Testimony will be taken Wednesday by Judge Thomas W. Dickey in the plea of Arthur F. Dean, confessed slayer of his sister-in-law, Helen Nasal. Because he has entered a plea to the crime of first degree murder, the usual time alloted to a murder trial will be reduced to about one day. It is probable that both commonwealth and defense will have their testimony all in by adjournment Wednesday afternoon.

"Much To Encourage Britain," Says King George

King Speaks To People On Radio

Air Raid Warning In Progress As King Started His Address

PRAISES SUBJECTS FOR COURAGE SHOWN

(International News Service)

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Although much has happened since the beginning of the war, Britain today stands braced to battle off a German invasion and "there is much to encourage us," King George told his subjects Monday in a radio broadcast from an underground shelter in bomb-damaged Buckingham palace.

"We have with us great contingents from the forces of our Allies," he declared. "We have behind us the good will of all who love freedom. Our friends in the Americas have shown us this in every way, not the least by their gifts for the relief of suffering in the war."

The British people entered this war "with open eyes, recognizing how formidable were the forces against them but confident in the justice of their cause," the king declared.

Stand In Front Line

"We stand in the front line to champion those liberties and traditions that are our heritage, and as we brace ourselves for the battle there is much to encourage us," he said.

The 117th London air raid warning since the beginning of the war was in progress as the king's radio broadcast began, and just as he started speaking the "all clear" signal was sounded.

The king thanked civilian workers, firemen, salvage crews and other air raid precautions workers for their devotion to duty "in the face of grave and constant danger." Their work, he said, "has won a new renoun for the British name."

He likewise announced establishment of a new mark of honor—the George cross—for civilian men and women who distinguish themselves in service to Britain behind the battle lines.

The new decoration will rank next to the Victoria cross and the George medal, he declared.

Praises Subjects

Reiterating his praise for the courage of his subjects, King George declared:

"There will always be an England to stand before the world as a citadel of freedom."

He spoke of the repeated bombings to which London and other British cities have been subjected, declaring "the mother city of the British commonwealth is proving herself to be built as a city that is at unity in itself."

"It is not the walls that make the city, but the people who live within them," the king said, "and the walls of London may be battered but the spirit of the Londoner stands resolute and undismayed."

The monarch expressed sympathy with the sorrowing parents whose children died in the mid-Atlantic torpedoing of a Canada-bound refugee ship.

Foul Deed

"Surely the world could have no clearer proof of the wickedness against which we fight than this foul deed," he declared regarding the sinking of this unnamed ship.

"We live in grim times, and it may be that the future will be grimmer yet," the king declared.

"Winter lies before us, cold and dark. But let us be of good cheer. After winter comes spring, and after our present trials will assuredly come victory and a release from these evil things.

"Let us, then, put our trust, as I do, in God and in the unconquerable spirit of the British people."

A Proclamation

By His Excellency, the Mayor of New Castle setting aside Sunday, September 29th as a day of prayer to be known as "Great Britain Sunday."

Whereas, the governors of many oy our 48 states and the mayors of many of our leading cities are joining in proclaiming Sunday, September 29th, as a day of prayer to be known as "Great Britain Sunday"; and

Whereas, the people of Great Britain are suffering daily the horrors of a total war in which their cities are bombed and laid waste without mercy; and

Whereas, Great Britain, the last great democracy remaining in the Old World, appears in imminent danger of invasion by the armed forces of totalitarianism; and

Whereas, the sympathies of the people of the United States are always with a free people defending their freedom and their homeland; and

Whereas, the democratic institutions for which our ancestors fought and died on many a battlefield, and which we Americans hold so sacred today, may be endangered if Great Britain falls before the armed might of the forces of totalitarianism; and

Whereas, Great Britain is defending the ideals and the way of living which we Americans also hold most dear; and

Whereas, the people of the United States are anxious to extend to the Old World's last great democracy all the aid we can without violating our neutrality or involving our own country in war; and

Whereas, from its beginnings America has been a religious nation, believing in the omnipotence of Almighty Providence and invoking His aid in all projects which we deemed right and just;

Now, therefore, I, Charles B. Mayne, mayor of the city of New Castle, do hereby proclaim Sunday, September the Twenty-ninth as a day of prayer to be known as "Great Britain Sunday" and do hereby call upon the people of the city of New Castle to observe the day according to their respective religious convictions.

Done at the City Hall this the 24th day of September on the Year of Our Lord Nineteen Hundred and Forty.

CHAS. B. MAYNE.
Mayor.

Polar Bear Liver Not Fit For Food

Explorer Relates Experience Following Meal On Bear Liver And Onion

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 24.—Memo to gourmets from a scientist who learned the hard way: Never, never eat polar bear liver, nay, not even with onions. Beef liver and calf liver are fine and dandy and highly-palatable, but polar bear liver—perish the thought!

J. Kenneth Doutt, curator of mammalogy at Carnegie Museum here, is the authority of the "toxicity of polar bear liver." Writing in a recent issue of the "Journal of Mammalogy," Doutt told of a Canadian expedition which resulted in a fine catch of two polar bears in the Hudson Bay Region. And so:

"Someone thought it would be nice to have polar bear steaks for dinner, but the bears had not been skinned. The heart and liver had been saved, however, so we compromised on fried liver and onions.

"The next morning all of us were sick, those who had eaten most heavily being the most affected. Violent headaches, nausea, a sensation of dizziness and torpor overtook us. Those who partook liberally of laxatives seemed to improve more rapidly than those who did not."

Unique Fellowship Granted University To Study Reform Work In Prison

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—For the next two years, two young University of Pennsylvania students will work, play and chat with inmates of Eastern penitentiary under a unique fellowship granted the university.

Purpose of the plan, according to Col. Joseph Klapp Nicholls, of the Philadelphia Bar Association, is to determine if criminals might be reformed through correction of mental, nervous or physical disorders.

Indirect goal of the "mass psychoanalysis," it was said, is to improve parole programs. Col Nicholls said Eastern penitentiary officials had offered full cooperation with the psychiatrists, who will commute between the University and the prison.

Iron Lung Used For First Time

Mechanical Respirator At Jameson Memorial Hospital Meets First Test

Jameson Memorial hospital's mechanical respirator, or "iron lung" as it is more commonly known to the public, met its first test here on Saturday, when Miss Sue Malenky, of Farrell, was rushed here in an effort to save her life.

Complications, which produced a paralysis of the respiratory organs, resulted in the girl's death.

The great life-saving machine functioned perfectly, Dr. Wayne W. Bissell, Medical Director of the hospital stated. It was purchased last year with funds contributed by local citizens in a campaign sponsored by the New Castle Kiwanis Club.

Hilltop Club Names Permanent Officers

The speaker of the evening was George T. Weingartner who spoke on the financial dangers that lay in the continued piling of public debt. Attorney Marshall G. Matheny also spoke.

It's not only the news of foreign events and national affairs, of battle fronts and political struggles, that makes the newspaper so vital a force in people's lives. It's the news of happenings close at home, too. It's the news of what's going on in the town we live in, among the people we know...the intimate, personal things.

And only in the local newspaper can we satisfy our craving for the local news. For the newspaper first of all reflects the life of the community it serves...and each newspaper, like each community, has characteristics that distinguish it from others.

It's not surprising, in view of the eagerness with which people turn to their local newspapers every day, that advertisers who have anything to sell to any community...or group of communities or all communities...have found newspaper advertising so productive and so economical.

Kidnaper Held At San Francisco May Meet Two More Mattson Kidnap Witnesses

(International News Service)

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24—Wilhelm Jakob Muhlenbroich, 40-year old alien German kidnaper of little Marc De Tristan, may be brought face to face with two additional witnesses in an attempt by G-Men to link him with the kidnap-murder four years ago of 10 year old Charles Mattson in Tocoma, Wash.

It was learned today that the federal bureau of investigation has informed the slain boy's sister, Muriel, student at Wellesley college, Mass. and Virginia Chatfield, Seattle bank clerk, that they may be called upon as was 20 year old William Mattson, brother of the slain boy, to confront Muhlenbroich.

William Matson, who with his sister Muriel and Miss Chatfield, saw the killer who kidnaped Charles from the home of his wealthy physician-father December 27, 1936, was brought from Seattle last night by plane to face Muhlenbroich.

G.Men closely guarded the result of that dramatic moment.

Pastors To Stress Registering-Voting

Ministerial Association Has Meeting Monday; Rev. Norman F. Spear Is Speaker

Necessity for registering and voting in the fall election will be stressed this coming Sunday by New Castle ministers, according to a report given Monday morning by Dr. J. J. McIlvaine for the law and order committee when the New Castle Ministerial Association gathered for its regular meeting in the First Presbyterian church, corner of North Jefferson and Falls streets.

The meeting of the association was presided over by it's new president, Rev. A. M. Stump, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church. Rev. C. J. Burton, pastor of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, conducted the devotional service.

At this time, Rev. Stump extended an invitation to the ministers and their wives to attend the farewell tea given at the Stump residence Monday evening in honor of Rev. Rees T. Williams, pastor of the First Congregational church, who is leaving the last of this month to go to Utica, N. Y., where he has accepted a new charge.

Rev. John Earl Myers, Jr., new pastor of the Mahoningtown Presbyterian church, was introduced and welcomed into the fellowship of the association. Dr. McIlvaine then presented the speaker of the morning, Rev. Norman F. Spear, pastor of the Reformed Presbyterian church.

Rev. Spear read a most interesting paper on the subject, "America's Greatest Need is Not Gold, But God", after which a discussion was held involving the issues brought out in the paper. The meeting adjourned with a prayer offered by Rev. C. N. Moore.

At the next meeting of the Ministerial Association on Monday morning, October 7, at 10:30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church, the guest speaker will be Owen Penfield Fox, city forester. His subject will be "Indian Lore".

Nebraska Eleven Is Highly Rated

Line Averages Nearly 200 Pounds, Veteran Backfield For Cornhuskers

Missouri Chief Contenders For Big Six Conference, With Their Paul Christman

By HAROLD A. HEREFORD
International News Service Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24—A powerful Nebraska eleven boasting a juggernaught line averaging nearly 200 pounds to the man, equipped with a veteran backfield and coached by that hard-bitten grid campaigner, Major "Biff" Jones, today stands as a challenge to ambitious aspirants to the 1940 big six conference football crown.

Jubilant cornhuskers fans this year are predicting not only that Nebraska will again gain pre-eminence in the conference which it formerly dominated, but that this year's veteran team will make a strong bid for national honors. A schedule which includes non-conference games with Minnesota, Iowa Pittsburgh and Indiana should give the Cornhuskers ample opportunity to display their power outside the conference as well as in it.

Considered as chief threats to Nebraska's title hopes are Don Faurot's Missouri Tigers, the conference's defending champions, and Tom Stidham's Oklahoma Sooners.

Christman Injured

Last year, led by all-American Paul Christman, Missouri won the big six title the hard way by whipping both Nebraska and Oklahoma. But "passing Paul" suffered a leg injury this spring on the baseball diamond and what effect it will have on his gridiron showing this year is still to be seen.

In addition Missouri lost by graduation the Orf twins, Roland and Robert, the talented ends who with Christman rounded out one of the country's most unusual passing combinations.

Down at Norman, Okla., Coach Stidham's team, which has occupied a prominent place in the national football picture, for the last couple of years, was hard hit by graduations, having lost nine first stringers. But if the Sooner's sophomores and lettermen come through Oklahoma may yet have plenty to say about the big six title.

At Manhattan, Kan., the Aggies new coach, John (Hobbs) Adams, is expected to put on the field a team that may prove a surprise to any opponent that regards them lightly.

Backfield Veterans

Youthful Coach Jim Yeager at Ames, Iowa, will have an eleven with a backfield studded with veterans behind a veteran line and his entry is expected to be heard from.

Loss through a knee injury of Ralph Miller, one of last season's outstanding passers, has caused a drop in the stock of Gwinn Henry's Kansas Jayhawkers. But before the season is over the Kansas entry may be causing plenty of headaches to opposing conference teams, and can be counted on as usual to offer ample opposition to her traditional foe, Missouri, no matter how strong the Tigers may be.

DEVELOP NEW TOBACCO PLANT VIA X-RADIATION

(International News Service)

BERKELEY, Cal.—A new race of the tobacco plant, developed from X-radiation at the University of California, is being grown experimentally in the commercial tobacco-growing areas of the United States, Peru and Australia.

The new plant has more leaves than ordinary tobacco, has none of the usual sucker growth and is slower growing, thus promising a more abundant yield, less costly production and the possibility of adaption to the regions of late frost.

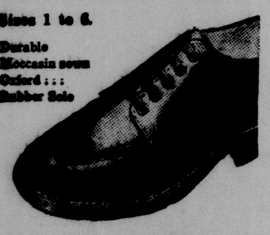

These three considerations occupy a place of critical importance in the tobacco industry.

Candella Meets Retardo Tonight

Billy Reale Scheduled To Box Shed Bell At Ellwood

BENEFIT FOR AMERICAN LEGION

Tonight in the Lincoln high school gymnasium, Ellwood City, there'll be a calendar of eight amateur boxing bouts presented as a benefit for the American Legion Armistice Day celebration fund. Several New Castle boxers will appear on the card, topplined by Mike Candella, Youngstown vs. Babe Retardo, Ellwood City, featherweights, both destined to go three rounds.

The card is attractive and there ought to be plenty of action. The other bouts follow:

Billy Reale, Castlewood vs. Shed Bell, Youngstown, 147.

Roy Crews, Ellwood City vs. Johnny Zokosky, Warren, O., 147.

Joey Yarosz, Monaca vs. Tom Bell, Youngstown, 135.

Ossie Peglise, Youngstown vs. Clint Brown, Grove City, 118.

Russ Baxter, New Castle vs. Andy Bennick, Youngstown, 147.

Rickey Loccisano, Ellwood City vs. Vic Ragatti, Warren, O., 135.

Lloyd McKain, Warren, O., vs. Tony Arkett, Ellwood City, 118.

Merritt Book made the matches. The state athletic commission and A. A. U. have given sanction to the bouts.

The officials will be named shortly before the first bout is scheduled to begin.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS' LAND

Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland middleweight knocked out Larry Kellum of Beacon, N. Y., in the first round last night at Hickey park, Millvale. He delivered the knockout punch 17 seconds after the fight opened. Several minutes were required to restore Kellum to consciousness. Bivins is a former Cleveland amateur who has been crawling steadily up the fight ladder. Mike Raffa, East Liverpool, also a former amateur, won by a knockout from Johnny Buff of New York City, in the seventh round of a featherweight bout.

Red Francis, Altoona professional won first money from Sam Parks, Jr., Pittsburgh, yesterday in the Cambridge, Pa., Riverside open golf tournament. Francis posted a 36-hole card of 139, one stroke ahead of Parks. Tony Factor, Ellwood City, turned in a 144.

With the pigskin scarcely dry, the season being in its infancy, Jerome Szafran, halfback of St. Joseph's, Oil City, turned in a 109-yard dash for a touchdown against Centerville, at Oil City. The touchdown broke a 6-6 deadlock and St. Joseph went on to win, 18-6. Playing against Centerville, Szafran stood in the end zone to take the pass from St. Joseph's center on the St. Joseph one-yard line. He dropped back nine yards behind the goal to elude tacklers, then whipped around end to race the length of the field.

Dorothy Traung set a 2-over par at Del Monte, Cal., to win medal honors in the qualifying round of the 1940 National women's golf championship Monday. . . . . St. Francis will play five home games on Cresson high gridiron because the St. Francis stadium is not yet completed.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Myland of Chicago have completed a visit with the former's sister, Mrs. F. J. Englehardt of 506 Sheridan avenue, who is ill. Myland will be recalled as one of the best ball players this city has had and he is one of the directors of the Standard Pullman ball team in Chicago.

Comiskey-Baer Battle Thursday

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Pat Comiskey, youthful New Jersey slugger, began tapering off today for the biggest battle of his career, a scheduled 15-round heavyweight fight with Max Baer, former heavyweight champion, in Jersey City Thursday, as betting odds took an overnight drop from 8 to 5 in favor of Baer to nearly even money.

Comiskey, a broth of a lad of 19, finished up his boxing sessions yesterday by battering around his sparring partners for five rounds. Bill Daley, his manager, said Pat will wind up his final two days at his training quarters in Hackensack, N. J., by taking light exercises and a little road work. He predicted Comiskey would kayo Baer within three rounds.

Major College Grid Teams To Play Saturday

Ohio State Tackles Pitt, Minnesota Meets Washington, Michigan Plays California

By LAWTON CARVER
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Time, tide and the football season wait for no man and the finish of no baseball season, with the net result that, after preliminary gestures over the past week-end, another gridiron campaign will be started next Saturday. Some of the major elevens will be idle for still another week, but many of them will go right on into action and the day's schedule will include top flight struggles.

The following compilation of major attractions will give you a rough idea:

Headlining everything else on the national slate will be games between Ohio State, Western Conference contender, and Pittsburgh; Michigan, another Western Conference standout, and California, and Minnesota, also among the western loop's toughest, and Washington, chief threat in the Pacific Coast Conference, all followed by Tulane vs. Boston College, Washington State vs. Southern California, Navy vs. William and Mary, Florida vs. Mississippi State, Louisiana State vs. Mississippi, Southern Methodist vs. U. C. L. A., Vanderbilt vs. Washington and Lee and Duke vs. V. M. I.

Will Play Friday

Of the foregoing, all games are Saturday features, except the Southern Methodist-U. C. L. A. clash, which is billed for Friday and will be the starter of tough schedules for both elevens.

Texas A. and M., potential southwestern and national champion will tackle Texas A. and I., as a starter, and, while everybody will be watching this one for possible slants on the Aggies' future, there will be little fear over the outcome.

The Duke-V. M. I. game will be a southern headliner, inasmuch as this one will offer a line on whether Duke is about to go on to a sixth Southern Conference title.

Tennessee, the sizzling hot favorite in the Southeastern Conference and a candidate for a return trip to the Rose Bowl, will begin a comparatively weak schedule by meeting Little Mercer, while North Carolina, another top-flight Dixie eleven, will take on Wake Forest, which opened its season over the past week-end by romping through, around and over little William Jewel by 79 to 26, most decisive score of the day.

Busy Week For Local Elevens

Football Hits New Early Season High For Local Clubs This Week-End

Football hits a new early season high this week, so far as Lawrence county elevens are concerned.

Every local outfit is billed for action this week-end.

Westminster's Titans, hopped up over an impressive 26-0 victory over Edinboro Teachers, clash with West Virginia's Mountaineers, Saturday in Morgantown.

New Castle high's constantly improving machine goes to bat against Beaver Falls, Friday night at Taggart stadium.

Ellwood City takes on one of its major foes, Rochester high, Friday, in Ellwood City.

Union Township plays host to a formidable opponent, Greenville high, Friday afternoon.

Shenango Township opens the home campaign Friday afternoon, skipping the lines against Zelienople high.

Bessemer high, conqueror of Hubbard, O., last Saturday, is slated to perform on Rayon field, battling the rugged Ursuline high force, Saturday.

New Castle's junior highs draw the curtain Thursday afternoon with Ben Franklin meeting Sharpsville at Taggart stadium and George Washington entertaining Campbell on George Washington field.

The various grid camps hum with activities as local grid squads prepare for the impending clashes.

HITLER LIKENESS 'ADORNS' BRITISH VESSELS ON SEAS

(International News Service)

PORTLAND, Ore.—War-time caution and secrecy aboard British vessels still plying the seven seas is indicated by prominent posters displayed on ships arriving in Portland and other coast ports.

Bearing an uncomplimentary likeness of Fuehrer Hitler, and captioned "Beware", the yellow posters carry the following poetic warning:

"Whether alone or in a crowd,
Never write or say aloud,
What you're loading, whence you sail
Where you're bound for, when you sail."

In bold face type the instructions conclude:

"Above all never give away the movements of His Majesty's ships."

Nearly Half Of Game Birds Shot By Hunters Not Bagged But Left In Crippled Shape

STATE COLLEGE, Sept. 23 — From one-third to one-half of the game birds shot by hunters each year are not bagged but escape in a crippled condition to fall prey to vermin or to die of wounds, Dr. Logan J. Bennett, head of wildlife research at the Pennsylvania State college, estimated today. His opinion is based on investigations in both Iowa and Pennsylvania.

Veteran hunters lose less than half as much as the average, Bennett said. Men who hunt regularly, year after year, usually refrain from attempting chance shots, but try to kill cleanly whenever they shoot at all. Shooting at out-of-range birds is the most common cause of avoidable losses of game.

One reason for out-of-range shooting is faulty judgment of distance. Shotguns seldom will kill cleanly at distances above 40 to 50 yards, although some manufacturers claim them to be effective up to 80 yards. An occasional game bird may be knocked down at 100 yards or more, but such shots represent luck rather than skill.

Good retrieving dogs, said Bennett, cut game losses almost in half. A man on foot has a very poor chance of running down a wounded pheasant in a cornfield, of finding a crippled quail in a thicket, or of bringing in a winged duck from a pond of soupy or weedy mud.

Persons who are new at hunting often are too excited or are uninstructed about marking down where game falls when it is hit. Most experienced hunters mentally line up their position with the point where game has fallen and some prominent object on the landscape after each successful shot. This may be done while the hunter is reloading his gun and is very helpful in locating game.

The investigation in Pennsylvania was conducted by Pierce E. Randall, an associate of Dr. Bennett.

High Regulars In Light Drill

New Castle High Meets Beaver Falls High Here On Friday Night

Monday was a comparatively easy day for the New Castle High regulars or varsity men, the only workout for the boys who made life miserable for Youngstown East High last Friday night was a light signal drill, then, they were excused until this afternoon.

Not so easy though for the second and third team members who went through a regulation game and fought hard to win, one side wearing yellow jerseys, the other red jerseys. The yellow jerseyed boys won the game, no track being kept of the number of points.

Beaver Falls Friday

Beaver Falls High will be here Friday night for their annual battle with the "Red Hurricane" and can be expected to put up their customary hard fight against the Red and Blacks. Coach Frank "Tiger" Walton has started intensive drills in the valley and will bring a hard fighting team here Friday.

The New Castle regulars came out of the Youngstown game in good shape. Roberts was a little bit used up, but will be a starter Friday night, along with Ciazza, Lee and McKee in the backfield. Pugh is back in shape again and is giving Parou a tough fight for the starting right end job.

Ticket Manager Robert Mills announced today that the tickets for the game Friday are now on sale at the Sporting Goods store, 105 North Mercer street.

M. D. Cohn, manager of the Penn Theatre has invited the entire New Castle High squad to be his guests tonight to see Cary Grant in the "Westerner." Last night Wheelers gave the boys a feed.

Hal Trosky, first baseman, is the first captain the Cleveland Indians have had since 1927 when George Burns, also a first sacker, held the job.

Junior Highs To Open On Thursday

Both George Washington And Franklin High Will Face Opponents Here Thursday

The two New Castle Junior Highs who still have football—Washington and Franklin—will open their 1940 seasons in New Castle on this coming Thursday. Mahoning High has abandoned the grid pastime.

Franklin High faces Sharpsville Junior High at Taggart Field at 3:30 o'clock. The East Siders have been working out for the past two weeks and are slowly rounding into shape it was announced by Head Coach Emmett Gillespie and his assistant Bill Wallace. Only four lettermen are back on the Franklin squad this year—Tony Canami, Sam Sanfilippo, Stanley Sisco, and Joe Joseph all linemen. No backfield lettermen are available. A squad of 50 has been working out.

Washington High At Work

Coach Art Alexander has had his Wash High gridders at work for two weeks now and has been getting good results. The Washingtons meet the Campbell Junior High team here Thursday at Wash High Field at 3:30 o'clock.

Alexander has not given any hint of his starting eleven. There have been some merry battles for the various varisity jobs. Bob Doster 155 pounds may start at fullback, the lefthalf will more than likely be Art Altman a 160 pounder. At the tackles Alexander will have a big lad, Bill Jameson a 180 pounds, and Henry Clark a 155 pounder.

Maurice Donegan is doing a swell job of punting this year. Only two lettermen, Doster and Altman, are back on the first team. However, the squad is showing a lot of fight and the proper spirit and will no doubt go places this year.

Ruth Wants To Become Manager

Famous Home Run Slugger Now Retired Would Take Managerial Job In Minute

By LAWTON CARVER
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Just before Christmas it is customary to interview Santa Claus; and just before the world series you must talk over the baseball situation with Mr. Baseball Himself—Babe Ruth. No matter which American league club wins the pennant, that club will win the world championship, the Babe said emphatically today.

"We've got it on them," he said. "And the National league won't win this championship any more than they have in other recent world series. All the American league club has to do is show up."

The Babe currently is in the midst of picking his 18th annual all-star baseball team and is spending his time surrounded by batting averages, pitching percentages and all the other facts and figures and fancies that go into such an undertaking.

Not Rough Enough

But above everything else he would like to get back into baseball. He thinks there is a place in baseball for him and he is only awaiting the opportunity to step in and prove that the greatest figure in the history of the game still has a place within its ranks.

"The worst thing about baseball today is," the Babe said, "the kids are soft. They don't play rough enough.

"The kids are lazy now. You have to kick them in the pants to get them to do anything. Heck, I've got spike wounds all over me. They don't get spiked any more these days. And I never saw so much of this business of batters getting hit in the head by a pitched ball. I went up to bat every day knowing that I was going to get dusted off. But, I never got hit in the head in my life. It's all different now from when the old timers were playing.

Would Be Manager

"As far as my getting back into baseball, I would accept a good offer as a manager only and would love it. But, I'm still shooting pretty good golf."

The Babe then began rummaging through drawers and closets and nooks and crannies to bring out all the cups he has won as a southpaw golfer. He has literally scores of them. Some of them are big enough in which to do the weekly family wash. They are all over the place and he said that in his last six rounds he had shot 72, 72, 73, 74, 74, 75.

"And that's shootin'," he said.

Southern Elevens Will Be Strong

Crucial Battles To Occur Today

Chicago White Sox Hope To Defeat League Leading Tigers, Indians Play Browns

By ED KIELY
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Long since eliminated from the American League pennant race themselves, the Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns today were in a spot virtually to decide who will win the championship.

The White Sox, battling for a fourth place finish—and possibly a third—after having threatened for the league title with an earlier stretch surge, carry the right to Detroit and the Browns, a team which has been throwing the wrench in nearly every pennant contender's plans, go to Cleveland.

Two-Game Series

In each instance the series is for two games, to be followed by a layoff Thursday and the grand finale between the Tigers and the Indians, beginning Friday in Cleveland. The season officially closes on Sunday.

Outcome of these "test cases" today could have a distinct and definite bearing upon whether the Bengals or the Tribe will meet the Cincinnati Reds in the world series. Leading the Clevelanders by one full game, however, the Tigers are the current choices to cling to their edge through the remaining five games.

But there is more to the story: The New York Yankees, who still have eight contests left and who are favored somewhat with a "breather" schedule, still have an outside chance to come along and capture their fifth consecutive flag. The chance is remote but if the Tigers blow three out of five games and the Indians one out of an equal number and the Yanks take all eight contests, the torrid race will end in a triple tie.

Pirates Beat Reds

The decided National League race continued to drag on to its spiritless finish. Yesterday's schedule was highlighted by the addition of another name to the royal 20-game winning pitchers' circle.

Claude Passeau, of Chicago, was tht latest member to be tapped to the exclusive club. He earned his twentieth victory of the season when the Cubs whitewashed the St. Louis Cardinals, 10 to 0. Passeau and three of his mates — Rip Russell, Bill Nicholson and Jim Gleeson—all hit homers to help the cause.

Joe Beggs suffered his first loss after nine victories in relief when the Pittsburgh Pirates ended the 1940 campaign at home by hammering the champion Cincinnati Reds, 12 to 9. Dolph Camilli's 23rd homer of the year came in the ninth inning after two were out to give the Brooklyn Dodgers a 3 to 2 decision over the New York Giants and Boston and Philadelphia divided a doubleheader, the Bees losing the opener, 6 to 2, and capturing the nightcap, 8 to 0.

Wabash Bears Hard At Work

The Wabash Bears with the Koppel victory cheering them on, will return to the E. and A. field tonight at 5 o'clock to start getting in shape for the big game this coming Sunday at New Kensington.

Willie Domenick, president of the Bears announced today that the club will make a special effort to defeat the New Kensington team, made up of college and high school stars of New Kensington-Arnold and Glassport. Coaches Harry Tuscano and "Bruiser" Adamo are [illegible] the men hard and hope to [illegible] few "foolers" to use on the New Kensington team Sunday.

Tulane, Tennessee, Georgia Tech Among Toughest In South This Year

Mississippi, Kentucky and Alabama Will Bear Watching By Opponents

By JOHN HENRY
International News Service Sports Writer

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 24.—Duke in the Southern Conference, and a mad scramble among Tennessee, Tulane and Gerogia Tech in the Southeastern, seemed to be the general forecast today as Dixieland impatiently awaited the start of the football season a week hence.

Highlighting everything will be the activities of Martin Sennett Connor, former governor of Mississippi, who has been named commissioner of the Southeastern Conference and as such will attempt to purify and regulate football among the teams under him. His is to be the role of czar, supposedly, and this may be the beginning of an era.

What this will mean, no one can tell, any more than they can tell with certainty what will happen in the races for the conference championships.

Duke vs. Pitt

As to the latter, North Carolina and Clemson are expected to give Duke its chief rivalry, if any, as the Blue Devils seek to make it six Southern Conference titles in a row. Duke again has the material and the confidence to go places under the direction of Coach Wallace Wade.

The highlight of the Duke schedule is the annual intersectional battle with Pittsburgh on November 30.

North Carolina is the big threat to Duke, with the game between these two likely to settle the Conference race. Clemson is a contender, but is faced by the necessity of replacing Banks McFadden, the all-America back of last season, and, moreover, will be led by a new coach, Frank Howard.

In the Southeastern everybody is content to string along with Tennessee, despite the loss of George Cafego, the great backfield star. Nearly all of the other players who went to the Rose Bowl will be back and that seems to make Tennessee tough enough for a schedule that is light compared with games arranged for some other Dixieland elevens.

Tulane Tough

Tulane has a far tougher schedule than Tennessee and will spread out intersectionally, but has three teams with which to make a battle.

Georgia Tech will depend on a tricky backfield, which fairly dazzles with its ball-handling.

Other teams in the South that will bear watching include Mississippi State, Kentucky, Alabama and Mississippi, while Auburn, Georgia and Louisiana State figure to be strong, but can't hope to win any titles.

New coaches, besides Howard at Clemson, are Tom Leib at Florida, Henry Sanders at Vanderbilt, Jenks Gillem at Sewanee and John (BO) Rowland at the Citadel.

Mel Brewer, Illinois football captain of 1939, is taking graduate work at the University of New Hampshire.

FROM ME TO YOU

By MESEKALL

It won't be long until the month of September is over . . . then just around the corner will be winter with all its cold and snow. But there will be plenty to do . . . there will be football games and while we are talking about football games . . . do you know how many people have attended the three games that have been played in New Castle so far this year . . . take a guess . . . in case you can't figure it out, it is reported that about 25,000 fans have gone through the turnstyles at the stadium . . . that my friends, is quite a gate . . . if the attendance keeps up the financial situation of the outfit should be in first class condition by the end of the season.

* * *

We don't usually publish poems written by just anyone . . . but we will make an exception today and give you one by a little boy about his mother.

Your Mother is your best friend
On her you can depend.
She always will defend
From all things to the end.

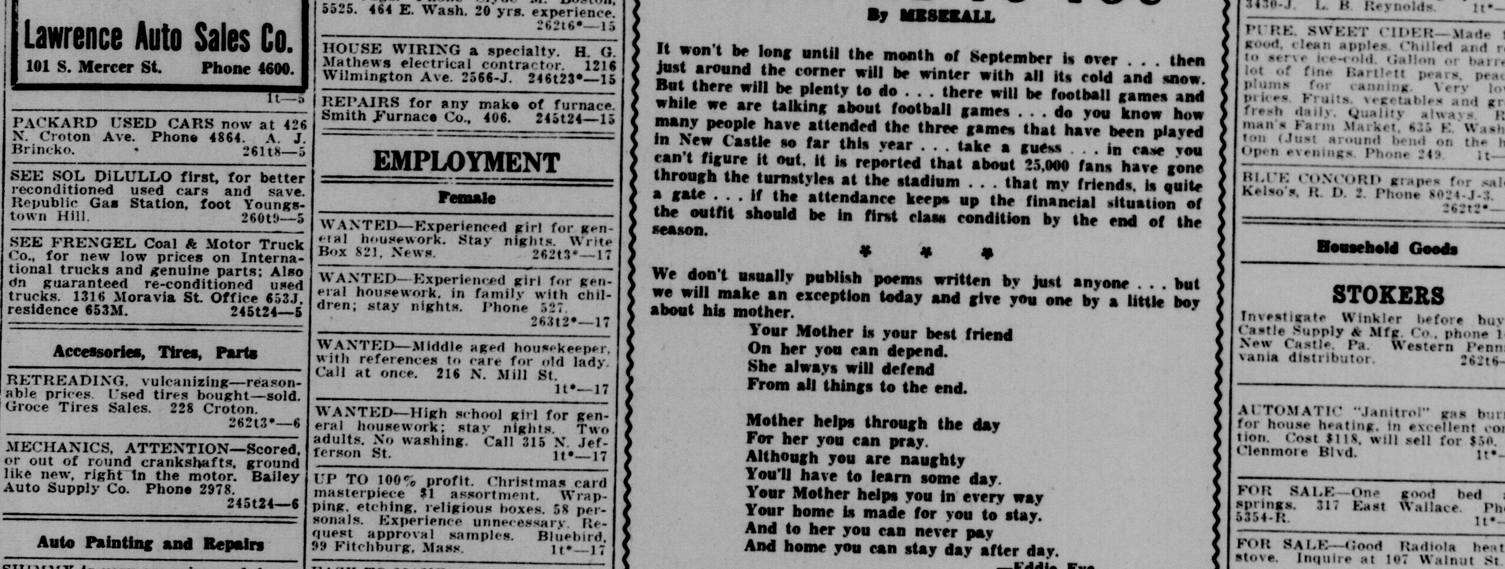

Mother helps through the day
For her you can pray.
Although you are naughty
You'll have to learn some day.
Your Mother helps you in every way
Your home is made for you to stay.
And to her you can never pay
And home you can stay day after day.

—Eddie Fye.

This might be a Saturday night item but it might also in these modern times be of interest on Tuesday . . . some people do take baths other nights than Saturday . . . but in case you were wondering what kind of soap they used in the famous baths of ancient Rome the answer is none . . . that's one item they didn't have . . . to cleanse the body, a slave wielded a strigil, or skin scraper. When in Rome do as the Romans do. We've seen the chap of 1940 who looked like he needed to bath thusly.
